If their support was not on quite so lavish a scale, at least they employed a wind band or, like Prince Karl Lichnowsky and the Russian Count Rasumovsky, a quartet of string players. For the Wo die Unschuld Blumen streute year running Beethoven decided to visit Teplitz, travelling via Prague and arriving there on 5 July. Four of the five submitted works had been composed and performed in Bonn long before the move to Vienna, and were therefore no evidence of progress.
