The advent of radio enabled many 20th-century demagogues' skill with the spoken word. Is it any good? Hitler usually began his speeches by speaking slowly, in a low, resonant voice, telling of his life in poverty after serving in World War I, suffering in the chaos and humiliation of postwar Germany, resolving to reawaken the Fatherland.

Learn how we rate. Gradually he would escalate the tone and tempo of his speech to pander to passion, prejudice, bigotry, and ignorance, rather than reason. McCarthy never turned up even one Communist in the State Department.
